Please set up an appointment, I seem to have difficulty coping with issues and having nightmare. please note that confidentiality is the paramount importance for my recovery. Sine after my accident in the WTR, I dealt with PTSD, but this one seem to be more severe, and I do suffer form a Disthamic disorder, which can become into a severe depression; please avoid communication to ether ( including K. Ceng, since she is mediating between the school and me,with a 90% towards the school) about my problem, since the standard of duty in this school is to/and within the employees of the school, and not to the students as it should be.

Regarding-- but not limited--to damages for the discrimination, violation ADA and invasion of privacy (email hacking). As the school and SUNY may know, I am not interest in suing if the school nor SUNY or any body, as long the school and/or SUNY agree to compromise with me in ways that do not have to involve monetary damages and attorneys, except for Attorneys for the school and for my self that will have to draw the documentation or out court settlement, wavers etc; again this settlement may not have to involve monetary damages, but not limited to expenses.

Please be advised that the school may use this document as binding of my part, and an action of good faith, since I know that SUNY is taking care (dismissal of officials and contract not to be renewed and others) in correcting the discriminatory policies of the school. Also I need to here from you that you are in posetion of this email, and that a proper answer will be available to me within this winter brake. In the case that the school does not answer, I will assumed that the school and SUNY will prefer to litigate. In the case that the school or SUNY decide to talk with me, this conversation must be done through the K Ceng and school and/or SUNY's attorneys and--if decide to have--my Attorney. Please understand that the implication of I taken legal action against all parties, will be through a Law Firm and not as pro-see and will include--but not limited-- to all the school official (including police officials) named in prior legal documentation[s] sent to the school and SUNY plus Mr. Schwartz and two officials of SUNY Albany as defendant for--but limited--to violation of civil rights--ADA and housing discrimination and invasion of privacy; now that the US Department of Education, Civil Right Unit have given the OK the litigate. I will wait for your (the school and/or SUNY) answer.

COMPUTER CENTER

It has come to attention and to the attention of the US dept of Education "Civil Right" unit in NYS, that you are dispersing students email's passwords to school officials. This is serious Federal crime and violation of individual civil rights. You or the school or both are obligating the students to use your system[s] only this an aggravating factor. I have tried to forward the school email to my private email you do not allow it. You have dispersed my email password to R. Nassisi in term he has provided the same to other official, e.g. L Espinaldez from HR. This last person open my email account in front of me knowing the user ID and pass word, I ask how did he get my ID and Password? he said " R Nassisi provided to him; but he (Espinaldez) did go into the habit of watching students emails too much". You need to stop these practices immediately. Bellow is not a legal research, but it will give an idea of the legality of "hacking students email" from pervert minds.

Laws and regulations

Main articles: Privacy law and Information privacy law

The concept of "online privacy" is very broad and tends to cover other aspects of telecommunications and technology. The privacy concerns relate to both the misuse of certain information or the disclosure of this to others. Over the last thirty years, consumer privacy is a public issue that has received substantial attention. These rights protect individuals against the obligations by government. The growth of the Internet in general has produced new concerns about protecting the rights of consumers online. The Privacy Act prohibits the disclosure of personal information, no matter how this information is gathered. The consumers' control and knowledge applied to on the internet come under two categories- purchasing and surfing. The legal protection law for individual privacy in the United States has been passed fairly recently, and limits the protection of data. Data collection methods have raised concerns about consumer privacy. The FTC, in their efforts to ensure success, has developed principles that would protect consumers and the information they choose to display.

USA Patriot Act

The USA Patriot Act, signed into law on October 26, 2001 by former President Bush, is legislation to enhance law enforcement investigatory tools, investigate online activity, as well as to discourage terrorist acts both within the United States and around the world. This act reduced restrictions for law enforcement to search various methods and tools of communication such as telephone, e-mail, personal records including medical and financial, as well as reducing restrictions with obtaining of foreign intelligence.[104] Many of these expanded powers and lowered standards are not limited to terrorist investigations.[105]

The USA PATRIOT Act, professionally known as the “Uniting and Strengthening America by Providing Appropriate Tools Require to Intercept and Obstruct Terrorism Act” was put in to effect in reaction to the 9/11 Terrorist attacks. President Bush wanted to prevent terrorism in the United States and he believed that by keeping an eye on communication around the country, terrorism could be diminished. Although many people supported this law because of the September 11 attacks and the desire to keep America safe, many believe that this act interferes with civil liberties. The USA PATRIOT Act has been described as “unjustified infringement of privacy, association, and due process rights.” After the act passed, federal law enforcement now has access to additional wiretapping and surveillance.[106]

Electronic Communications Privacy Act (ECPA)

The Electronic Communications Privacy Act, enacted in 1986, is known as a “victory for privacy.” This act lays the boundaries for law enforcement having access to person electronic communication and stored electronic records. This includes email, pictures, date books, etc. With the enormous growth in the use of computers, many people store numerous items on servers that can ultimately be visible to many people. The ECPA protects this information from being accessed by law enforcement. There are five parts to the Act. Part I discusses the origin of the ECPA, Part II the law enforcement and the access provisions made involving electronic communication. Part II explains why this Act is needed due to the increase of personal internet use by individuals. Part IV observes the “business records cases” and pinpoints three principles. Lastly, Part V discusses ECPA’s reliance on the “business records cases” and the points against Part IV of the act.[107]

This act makes it unlawful under certain conditions for an individual to reveal the information of electronic communication and contains a few exceptions. One clause allows the ISP to view private e-mail if the sender is suspected of attempting to damage the internet system or attempting to harm another user. Another clause allows the ISP to reveal information from a message if the sender or recipient allows to its disclosure. Finally, information containing personal information may also be revealed for a court order or law enforcement’s subpoena.[39]

Employees and employers Internet regulations

When considering the rights between employees and employers regarding internet privacy and protection at a company, different states have their own laws. Connecticut and Delaware both have laws that state an employer must create a written notice or electronic message that provides understanding that they will regulate the internet traffic.[108] By doing so, this relates to the employees that the employer will be searching and monitoring emails and internet usage. Delaware charges $100 for a violation where Connecticut charges $500 for the first violation and then $1000 for the second.[108] When looking at public employees and employers, California and Colorado created laws that would also create legal ways in which employers controlled internet usage.[108] The law stated that a public company or agency must create a prior message to the employees stating that accounts will be monitored. Without these laws, employers could access information through employees accounts and use them illegally.[109] In most cases, the employer is allowed to see whatever he or she pleases because of these laws stated both publicly and privately.[110]

Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act

The Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act (GLB) was signed into law by U.S. President Bill Clinton and repealed part of the Glass-Steagall Act of 1933. The purpose of the legislation was to allow institutions to participate more broadly across investment banking, insurance, and commercial banking. The GLB also includes several provisions that aim to protect consumer data privacy. The Safeguards Rule, which implements the security requirements of the GLB Act, requires financial institutions to have reasonable policies and procedures to ensure the security and confidentiality of customer information.[111]

The Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA)

The Children's Online Privacy Protection Act prohibits website operators from knowingly collecting personally

RE: DISCIPLINARY SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES - Morales, Edward

MORALES, EDWARD

This message has been marked as Confidential.

Sent: Monday, February 11, 2013 10:57 PM

To: Kowalczyk, Wendy [Wendy.Kowalczyk@suny.edu]; Ceng, Kathleen; DaCosta, Daniel; danc.castro@ed.gov; james.nuser@ed.gov

Mrs. Kowalczyk.

Thank you for returning my email and taking the time but part of my accommodation for disability is that I need assistance for vacating a building in school. My apartment here school is my only and permanent address, thus assistance was not available, hence it cannot be mandatory and penalized, and community standards should follow ADA accommodation pressing charges. In my own apartment--inside--is not school property, and if a police officer that is disrespectful inside my home, does not have provable cause that a crime has been committed for going into my bedroom when the bread on the toaster burnt, which is highly a "Damages, defaces, destroys, or tampers with property owned by the college or in the possession of another person", I have the right to ask him to leave. I do have the police report in front of me, I will email it to you tomorrow. The police report distort the facts--as usual--it does not mention that the officer requested "driver license" instead of the school ID since I do not fit the student profile and "he was sure that this could not be my permanent address" have the right to terminate any permission to enter my protected home, when if I feel threatened to be arrested if I do not produce my driver license, he later called his supervisor and he told leave the premises, he then apologized and saying "he was new on the job" This same police report was used for the configuration of the charges, and inside my apartment is not school property, specially when it is my only permanent address. Having said this, it is only provable that the school again is acting in retaliation by issuing charges that are extreme, unconstitutional, misleading, and since they have communicated to other officials "they will get me expelled before graduation"--referring to residential life. Right now I have a better case to retaliation that during last summer, since this accusation are not founded. You must remember all of this for burnt toast; you tell me it is not base on retaliation? I am not sure about the other charges but I have filed a complaint about an discriminatory action against one professor, which I sent to him 2 days ago. The next day I get charged with "Fails to respect the ongoing legitimate functions of classes, meetings, office procedures, study, sleep, or any authorized College activity", you tell me if this is not retaliation.

Mrs Kowalczyk, you do have a standard of duty as an Attorney to stand by the fact and not assumption. I have giving you all the opportunities to work with me, but it seems, with all respect, that you have taken negative emotions towards me, which is not your standard of duty. You may be behind all of these discriminatory action, but I prefer to think that you are not. Last summer I was put in probation as a retaliatory action, now they are looking to expel me. This is how tragedies happen, by punching people to the edge and not doing thing in a timely legal and professional manner; of course this is not my case, but the on-set of PTSD is with me, and I being treated for it. I am also a disabled person, with a lot of witnesses (including school officials) and legal training and also very intelligent, if you thing that you cannot control this issues properly then ask me to leave the school, and I will. You know there are severe discriminatory--retaliatory and issues of abuse here, at school, in fact there are many students being seen by Psychologist--including me--because of the same reason. By me telling you all of this, I am also putting on notice about them, and responsible due to me as an Attorney. Please understand that dismissing me from school will only help my case. I wait for your response, and see your actions, which in term will dictate my actions.

Last year...How could issue a "no contact order" for someone you never meet and it is in your class, but you do not psychically know her? how do you interpret the law? how could you be issuing a vacating order if you know your are discriminating based on age and ADA?

Thanks,
